

ABSTRACT

A search-processing load for a wireless device is adjusted to reduce processor loading. A reference sector search frequency is measured and compared to a predetermined limit. If the reference sector search frequency exceeds the predetermined limit, then the search-processing load is reduced.

10147180.doc